Black Feminist Theory and Activism

Black Feminist Theory and Activism is a course that centers black women's rich intellectual traditions and political commitments in the United States. Over the course of the semester, we will critically examine the theoretical underpinnings and politics of modern black feminist thought.

Students will be introduced to both historical and contemporary black women intellectuals and activists through reading assignments, in-class exercises, films, and written assignments. The course gives equal weight to the articulation and praxis of black feminism, focusing on several black feminist activist moments and movements from the past thirty years.

Women's Autobiography and Memoir

In this course, we will examine a variety of women's autobiographies and memoirs, including a historical and cultural range. We will read some accessible theoretical texts to understand the difference between autobiography and memoir. Further, we will want to consider what is at stake historically and culturally when women write about themselves.

Works include Margaret Oliphant, The Days of My Life; Audre Lorde, Zami: A New Spelling of My Name; Kim Lefèvre, White Métisse; Alison Bechdel, Fun Home: A Family Tragicomic; Gail Caldwell, Let's Take the Long Way Home: A Memoir of Friendship; Carmen Rita Wong, Why Didn't You Tell Me? A Memoir; and Annie Ernaux, A Woman's Story.

Gender and the Politics of the Body

This graduate seminar uses feminist inquiry to interrogate socio-cultural meanings of the body. We will explore how our bodies are implicated in gender, sexual, race, class, and disability classifications and hierarchies and the role power plays in these processes. We will ask, how is something so intimately experienced as the body shaped by political, economic, scientific, and cultural norms? Through a diverse set of readings, we will examine the ways bodies are invested with meaning through medicine, technologies, labor (productive and reproductive), and the environment.

LAW 5541 Gender and the Law

This course deals with the following issues: women's de jure and de facto legal status in U.S. jurisdictions with some attention paid if time permits to the general legal status of women in European and Latin American countries. Topics to be covered include the history of suffrage and demands for equal rights for men and women, violence against women and violence committed by women, property rights, inheritance rights, reproductive rights, marriage, child custody, the definition of family, Title IX issues, employment discrimination, and gender issues in the legal profession. This course will not examine employment law or domestic relations law in as great depth as the Law Center's existing courses in these areas. Rather it is intended to situate these issues within the greater context of the law of gender.

Related Interest

You might be interested in taking these courses, but they are not already approved for the Graduate Minor. Please consult the list of Approved Electives for courses that will automatically count for the Minor. The WGSS Program would need to approve any Courses of Related Interest to count for the Minor.

LAW 5879 Law and Society (2 credits)

This seminar explores the intersection of law and society, expanding the law student's understanding of the interaction of law and culture. Using representative texts and depending on the semester, issues addressed will include the image of the lawyer and of the legal system in society and culture, the responsibility of the lawyer to others in society, the trial and the public imagination, and the literary interpretation of legal texts.
